Assata-Garvey And Me: A Global African Journey For Children

Synopsis

In this book, Runoko tells his daughter, Assata-Garvey, all about the African diaspora. The book is divided into sections on Asia, Europe, Australia, the Pacific islands and the Americas. Runoko has taken thousands of good photographs on his frequent travels: 25 of them, of which several in colour, illustrate this book. There are also two maps.

Customer Reviews

Runoko Rashidi is the leading expert on the history of the diaspora of Black people throughout the world. He has not only studied the work of other scholars but he has travelled to over 100 countries and met the Black communities. He has given thousands of lectures and his books, Black Star, the African Presence in Early Europe; African Star over Asia and Uncovering the African Past are very widely read and appreciated. Up to now he has written for an adult readership but he has always tried to interest children in the way Africans have moved throughout the world - mostly by their free will but sometimes through force.

very great pictures. thought the research was scant, and not detailed enough even for children.
