Customer Reviews

From the glossy covers to the crisp, vibrant interior photos, the titles in the revised Enchantment of the World series are as inviting as any travel guide. The clean design and clear chapter breaks make for easy use for middle-school students writing standard country reports, and the attractiveness of the package encourages wanderlust browsing. The origins of Islam, the diversity of Pakistan's population, and the nation's military leaders are all presented in Pakistan (terrorism is not treated in depth, but the Taliban and Osama bin Laden's discovery are topics briefly discussed in sidebars). Each book balances past and present and ends with a time line that sets, for instance, Russian history against a time line of world history. • Fast Facts, • a small further reading list, and index conclude. Accessible and informative—and pretty to look at, too.

Grades 6-9. --Ann Kelley

I love this series of books. I assign a country project for my third graders every year and if I don't have the country they choose I just buy the book for my classroom library!
