This is a fabulous book for anyone taking a packed lunch or just wanting a different and healthier choice. We get a quick run down on ingredients like which carbohydrates are good to use, healthy fats etc. In fact it's chock full of good advice and tips! It starts with some alternatives to the morning coffee including: Hot Morning Zinger which is lemon, ginger, mint and cayenne pepper. Cucumber and Mint Infusion. 1. GET UP and GO There's breakfast layer pots, hot and cold oats, muesli made easy, muffins, frittata and so many others, my favourites are: Good for you granola Coconut, pistachio-goji berry granola bars. 2. SALADS and SLAWS Here we get a huge selection of salads and dressings including: Nutty noodle salad Roasted cauliflower, chickpea, feta-pomegranate salad. Also pick n mix salads: Dressing layer Energy layer Endurance layer Deli layer Immune boosting layer Leafy goodness layer You build your salad in the above order starting with the dressing, there's so many options you could have a different salad everyday. 3. FILLING FLASKS A good selection of soups including: Spicy cauliflower and almond Immune boosting soup Creamy wild mushroom soup Spicy chickpea and red lentil. 4. FORK-FREE MEALS Sandwiches, dips, flatbreads, deli plates including: Warm roast vegetable and halloumi salad Cauliflower, green lentil and spinach curry Goats cheese dip. 5. SNACKS and BITES Crisps, popcorn, cookies including: Raw brazil nut date "cherry slice" Apricot, cashew energy balls. I have to mention while I'm vegetarian this book isn't there's plenty of meat options if that's what you're looking for. It's well presented and while there's plenty of pictures there isn't one for each recipe which I normally look for in any recipe book I read but this book is so good I let that slide. I voluntarily read a review copy kindly provided by NetGalley and Nourish.

Nowadays bringing your own lunch to work is trendy. It seems everyone is on a special diet, and bringing food from home is the best way to control what you're eating. Packed: Lunch

Hacks to Squeeze More Nutrients Into Your Day is a timely cookbook with dozens of great ideas for not only taking better tasting packed lunches, but also making them healthy packed lunches. Healthy food is also trendy, so this cookbook is a win-win. There are great ideas for packaging your lunches, jars, flasks, plastics, etc., as well as how to keep lunch fresh until time to eat. The book includes lunches that can be packed in about 5 minutes, and ideas on planning and shopping ahead so that everything is on hand to make lunches for the week ahead. The book also has ideas to save calories such as using yogurt instead of mayonnaise, pesto instead of butter, and lists ingredients that generally have additives and junk that most of us want to avoid. There are ideas for salads, soups, sandwiches, finger foods, and snacks, all of them much more appetizing than what most of us are used to. There are great pictures, a great index, and great ideas. For anyone who likes to take lunch rather than buy fast food, this is one of the best books out there. It is highly recommended for those who are trying to eat healthy, and are tired of plain, boring sandwiches. All told, this is an excellent book for everyone. The recipes and ideas are easy to understand and follow, and there are enough ideas in the book that everyone will find something useful for their personal lunch needs.
