This book has easy to follow instruction and many patterns too chose from. Much easier than watching on you tube

This was a pretty good book for beginners. It might appeal much more to a girl than a boy as far as design - some are more girly and feminine in style, but there are several that boys would like. My 3 boys learned a couple of new designs they hadn't learned from the kids at school already. It shows all the basics, plus some unique patterns, how to use the loom, etc. Like I said, great for beginners - not sure how much more detailed or complicated band jewelry could get, so it's probably most of what you'd need to know while learning, then you can improvise and use your imagination to build on what you learn in this book - that's what my kids are doing now. I got one for my boys, and another for my 12 year old niece - she loved it too.

We downloaded this book via Kindle so that we can use it on our kindle, ipods, and android phone. By having it always available in our pocket we've been able to make hundreds of bracelets with these simple directions, clear photos, and simple diagrams. Prior to using this book, our most complicated bracelets were the fishtail. Now we have amazing starbursts and zippers. The directions are quite clear, but having the clear photos has been quite helpful. Best of all, are the clear diagrams at the end of the sections. This allows us to quickly remember the order of weaving the bands, which is critical for a successful bracelet. We wish all Do-It-Yourself books were as clear as this book, Totally Awesome Rubber Band Jewellery.

Directions were clear and with nice pictures, but I was hoping there would be some more ideas, and some complex things besides the starburst.

My 11 year old daughter loves this as much as she does the duct tape craze. There are many different brands of the looms, not too expensive. It's buying all the rubber bands and charms and new stuff coming out all the time that cost you. You can get great prices, especially when you can buy in bulk. But the charms don't come in bulk and read the reviews on all of the accessories because there are many complaints about the quality-some of the rubber bands get complaints about breaking easily, the charms are often so cheaply made that they won't stay on etc. Just do your research and keep an eye out for sales at craft stores and online. I'm amazed at many of the things my daughter has made just using her own imagination. She has surpassed the need for this book so I am on the lookout for one that has more idea's and more difficult. When she has sleepovers and they start doing these, we don't even know we have any kids in the house because they will spend hours making things. One of them, the girls spent two hours or so and each of them made 12' jump ropes, which became many other things, including an "alarm system"for one thing. I love how they are having fun but are learning how to make their creations work since they aren't following a step by step guide. Even my husband gets involved because he's an engineer at heart and loves to be asked for help sometimes. Then my cats and I get to enjoy some quiet time. She doesn't even use the loom anymore and learned a way to use two pencils and it gives the bracelets and everything else a completely different look. Definitely a great buy for girls or boys who like making things. Yes, they have rubber bands in boy colors and prints as well. Both can make more delicate things and most of the boy items they show are wider, heavier duty looking. Like bracelets but they can use the right colors and it looks like a tire.

I like the concept of this book more than the execution. I was hoping for better photos and better explanations, that my daughter could follow along with. It has some cute ideas, but we are finding better directions and photos but just using google!

I like the book. It's nice and colorful. I had been concerned when ordering it because the cover says that the designs included would be for the Rainbow Loom, Cra-Z-Loom, and the FunLoom. Since we only have the Rainbow Loom, I was concerned that maybe only 1/3 of the designs in this book we would be able to use. But, I was happy that all of the designs are shown on the Rainbow Loom. A picture of the other looms is only shown near the beginning of the book, but all step-by-step photos are shown on the Rainbow Loom. The book shows you how to make these designs: Basic Bracelet, Fishtail Bracelet, Triple the Fun Bracelet, Back and Forth Bracelet, Zipper Bracelet, Flower Charm, Hand and Foot Accessories (I'm not crazy about the foot chain), Starburst Bracelet, Dangling Earrings, and Hippie Belt. The book is nice to give you some ideas about color choices for the different projects. They do try to show you step-by-step...but, it is difficult for my 10 year old to use the book. She's just learning making bracelets on the Rainbow Loom, so most of the designs are new to her. It's a bit hard for her to follow the book to make a bracelet style that she's never done before. She was getting frustrated. I think if I went through the instructions with her, we could probably figure it out together. But, I haven't had time to sit and read the instructions in the book. Instead, we went to the Rainbow Loom website and now she watches the videos there. They are great videos because they show you step-by-step, and talk you through each one, from beginning to end. Again, the book is nice to give you some ideas, or if you are on the go and away from a computer...but seeing the videos online is much easier to follow, at least for my daughter. The Rainbow Loom website has videos for making 51 different bracelets. Definitely bookmark that page and use that to learn how to make the different styles of bracelets. [...]
