Anna McQuinn, trained as a teacher, specializes in children's literature. She has been working in children's publishing for more than sixteen years as an editor, a publisher and writer. She also runs workshops and courses for small children in schools and libraries. She lives in Reading, England with her husband and daughters. Sophie Fatus is a full-time illustrator and sculptress who studied at the prestigious Academy of Fine Art in Paris. Her brightly colored illustrations and quirky style are world-renowned and have graced the pages of many Barefoot books including Babushka, The Real Princess, and Here We Go Round the Mulberry Bush.

My grandson became "addicted" to Barefoot Books animations on YouTube, but our internet connection isn't the best (buffering.....), so I was very happy to find them here on included with the books. I ordered 4 of them. "Driving My Tractor", "Knick Knack Paddy Wack" and "The Animal Boogie". And this one. The previous 3 are wonderful, clear and easy to see, very colorful. This one has very little animation and the singing isn't as lively as in the other books. Grandson never requests this title. He LOVES the other 3.

great book with cd. the pictures are so cute. my grangirl loves it.

The illustrations are colorful children enjoy them. At least, my special ed students do. The song is sung in a lively way, capturing the students' attention. Parts of the song get dragged out but overall, this is fun and upbeat.

My 2 1/2 year old loves this book and video - of course it's a catchy tune that everybody knows, but she likes the drawings and the movement in the video. I like that the "characters" are diverse and it is teaching my child about the rest of the world. We own this and the mulberry bush book, and will likely buy several more.

In the description says it comes with a cd, not true, I just wish people were honest and tell exactly what it is. Very disappointed!

Have the whole series of these books never a disappointment;compatible with pre school music activities

It was a gift for one of my son's preschool teachers, she said the kids love it...so, that's what I'm reporting!

These books are so awesome! My kids in my classroom love all of them, this one is cool because it says hello in more than twenty different languages. live the cd that came with it
