CANNING, DEHYDRATING, PICKLING, AND PRESERVING: RECIPES FROM WORLD WAR I

Synopsis

The following popular canning recipes of (1916) commemorate the fact that the methods and equipment used then have changed through the ages, while the principles remain the same. Ball, Kerr, and Tattler lids/bands have replaced paper/brandy, cork, clamp-lock lids, and paraffin sealing techniques. Paraffin will probably be resurrected in the future canning seasons for it was reliable one hundred years ago and is so today. The metal/rubber and reusable plastic lids are not sealing on a consistent basis, because of the cost factor in their manufacture. Paraffin may be purchased in any hobby/craft store. Try it you may like it. As far as the canner's participation is concerned, the procedure is simple in its use and requires no heat for melting. Just add the paraffin shavings to the jar before filling with any HOT mixture and the rest of the recipe is history. If it was good enough for grandma it is good enough for me.
