I've read a gazillion or so self-help and motivational books and articles and have listened to a few dozen more. This jewel of ageless wisdom, from the leading "success" and motivational writers and speakers today, is at the top-o-my-pile, a sure Top 5er. In fact, this compilation led me to several thinkers whom I'd not heard of before, so went out and got more of their materials too. If I were you, I'd buy a couple of extras to hand out to your best friends.

If I have listened to this production once, I've listened to it 50 times. It's incredibly thoughtful, provocative and wide-reaching. Not only do I hear the words of so many of the interviewees resonate in my head long after I've completed the CD, I get new understanding and nuggets to mull over with a fresh listening. I've since sought out and purchased works from many of the writers and I'm going to purchase the DVD set of the original production from which this audiobook is culled: "A Quest for Life." A goldmine 100 times over. I'm only amazed it was allowed to go out of print.

This is an excellent publication for everyone - no matter what age, race, educational level, or genre preference. It carries one through life's stages each of which will mean more depending upon where one's experience is at the time, but for those such as me who have traveled through life, this is a soothing, relaxing, but exciting and rewarding journey with Deepak Chopra, Steven Covey, Mother Theresa and more! It is so well produced that I wish with all my heart that I had not missed the PBS production. Trust me!

An amalgam of snippet voices from famous and not so famous people giving one and two liners of sage advice. Disorganized and uninteresting. The worst audiopurchase I have ever made.

It's true that unlike other programs this 4 CD set features a sound byte approach to ideas. It often alternates between statements from a number of mostly uncredited speakers. I was able to figure out most of them. However, this program has a number of things going for it. First, the CD are each centered thematically around one of the topics in the title. Second, there are some nice actionable exercises, particularly one by the Levines on breath. Write these exercises down yourself - it's easy. Third, and this was very meaningful to me, there are some people represented on this CD, especially Sam Keen and John O'Donahue that have not been recorded much on CDs. Since I listen to most of my audios in the car on CD, listening to these two wise men was a treat. Sure, other programs might be more organized, but I found this moving in many spots. I did not find the "stream of consciousness" approach distracting, once I stopped trying to figure out who the remaining speakers were. I recommend this program to people intrigued with the topics. One caveat, though - Stephen Covey is billed on the material as a speaker, but he has only a couple of spots.

So, buy it for the topics, but don't buy it because of Covey.

Imagine the best ideas from your favorite authors read to you at a perfect pace allowing you to assimilate each before the next arrives. This audio is perfect for short meditations as no continuity is needed. It is also great as a refresher if you've listened to the original speeches. Nearly all quotes are self contained and powerful. A few lacked focus and meaning. Sometimes I couldn't figure out who was saying the quote and would have liked to research it. It is great for exposing friends to New Age, metaphysical, spiritual, and Buddhist ideas as long attention spans are not needed.

One of the best tapes I've listened to on spirituality and life lessons. Like a good book that you can repeat and get new things out of it. The format having a blend of comments, stories, lessons from multiple speakers may not be for everyone, but I found it something that I looked forward to listening to on my commute and missed it when I was done.

I love this set. What I like most is that because of its snippet-format, it is perfect to listen to in the car. Unlike an organized format; if I get distracted, I don't miss an important point. I love starting my day listening to "Conscious Living," it sets a very uplifting and positive tone for the rest of my day.
